

Nuns boost donations by praying for dollars

Sisters of St. Francis nuns, including Sister Georgiana Franzluebbers, give blessings during a service. For a tax-deductible donation, the retired sisters of St. Francis will pray for people's health, wealth, sins or overall well-being.

Sister McReynolds: You don't have to be Catholic or even religious

MCT NEWS SERVICE

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO. You pay. They'll pray. For your sins, job or whatever ails you. Bear in mind — these are pros. "It's what we do," said Sister Stephanie McReynolds, head of the "Adopt-a-Sister" program at the expansive Mount St. Francis parish and retirement complex in northwest Colorado Springs, Colo. "It's our brand, so to speak." The program started last summer to publicly raise money for the order's nonsectarian counseling ministry that primarily serves the poor. About 130 donors now get the prayer services of about 40 sisters. "You don't have to be Catholic," McReynolds said. "You don't have to be any religion." It's not exactly tit for tat. The suggested yearly gift is $100 or more, but the amount doesn't matter. A couple of bucks gets the same spiritual boost.

Donors get a picture, name and phone number of a sister they can visit, write, call or maybe even send a plate of cookies to. Personal contact is encouraged. "A lot of us go through our prayer line, and we pray and never get any feedback," McReynolds said. Many sisters are retired or in the Mount St. Francis nursing center. This is a way for them to keep up their skills. "We're known as Sisters of St. Francis of Perpetual Adoration. Every day, every hour throughout the year, one of our sisters is in the chapel praying." That gave the board of Franciscan Community Counseling an idea. The ministry needed money for mental-health services offered at the Mount St. Francis campus and in an office at the old St. Francis Hospital east of downtown. So far, the program has paid off. An additional therapist has been hired and the waiting list for clients seeking services has decreased. Ann Carlisle, a non-Catholic who describes herself as "eclectic" about her spirituality, adopted two sisters. "It's good to have it from an expert and ones who do it as a life's work," said Carlisle, a private practice psychologist.

TRUTH IN SCRIPTURE

Jethro
Exodus 18

Jethro, Moses' father-in-law, brought Moses' family to meet him in the desert.

During his stay, Jethro observed Moses acting as the only judge among the people to make known to them God's will and to settle disputes.

Jethro suggested that Moses could not do this job by himself because it would soon wear him down. He recommends that Moses select capable men who feared God and were trustworthy and who hated dishonest gain - and appoint them to serve as judges over the minor cases. They would bring only the difficult cases to Moses.

Moses listened to Jethro and did as Jethro suggested.

Jethro returned to his home.

Child protection plan flies under the radar

Only one-third of respondents knew that their dioceses were required to provide counseling and other support to victims.

American bishops adopted the reforms five years ago

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON Most U.S. Roman Catholics are not aware of the child protection policies enacted in their dioceses in response to the clergy sex abuse crisis, a new survey has found.

About 45 percent of respondents knew that dioceses were expected to report abuse claims to civil authorities and knew that dioceses were supposed to bar credibly accused priests from any church work, according to the poll conducted for the Center for Applied Research in the Apostolate.

But only one-third of respondents knew that their dioceses were required to provide counseling and other support to victims, and only 15 percent knew that dioceses were reporting annually to the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops on their adherence to the policies.

American bishops adopted the reforms five years ago in Dallas under enormous public pressure.

The abuse crisis erupted in 2002 over the case of one predatory priest in the Archdiocese of Boston and spread to every U.S. diocese and beyond.

In the CARA poll, about 60 percent of respondents said they were now "somewhat" or "very" satisfied with the leadership of the U.S. church in general.

The survey of 1,048 self-identified adult Catholics was conducted Feb. 21 to March 5 and has a margin of error of plus or minus 3 percentage points.

Southern Baptist mission agency softens prayer policy

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

KANSAS CITY, MO. The Southern Baptist International Mission Board has taken a small step back from its controversial ban on appointing missionaries who use a "private prayer language" — or speak in tongues in private.

Mission board trustees, meeting May 7-9 voted overwhelmingly to turn the policies into guidelines instead.

The board is still discouraging the use of private prayer language, but an attorney for the agency, Matt Bristol, said adopting the term "guideline" means that the provisions "will be applied with a degree of flexibility" considering the circumstances of each candidate.

The trustees had adopted the policy in November 2005 out of concern about the growing popularity of Pentecostal practices, including glossolalia, by Christians overseas and at home.

Baptists and other Christians disagree over whether "baptism in the Holy Spirit," accompanied by speaking in tongues, ended with the apostolic period or continues today.

Still, some Southern Baptist leaders had protested the mission board's policy, saying the use of private prayer language should not be a test for potential missionaries. Previously, missionaries had been barred from speaking in tongues publicly, but their private prayer was not monitored.
